I bought GME, I didn't buy a lot but I have held for about a year now. Reddit told me RH was fuk and Fidelity was respectable. So I opened an account bought my shares there. First stock ever. I also called customer service and made sure that my shares couldn't be loaned or fractionally traded. I didn't say the words DRS, but that's what I meant and they told me in no uncertain terms that the shares were mine and not able to be loaned out or fucked with in any way.

I am kind of skeptical of the hype online. But after Fidelity's little whoopsie a while back I'm actually more skeptical of them than the retard apes accusing them of serious shit.

How do I determine the truth of the matter? Is there an account setting or detail I can check on my Fidelity account?
