"Life is like a snowball. The important thing is finding wet snow and a really long hill." Warren Buffett

Also Katamari Damacy is a kick ass video game if you've never played it. It has a great soundtrack and quirky characters. Basically you roll a ball around civilization and accumulate mass. You start off picking up bubble gum and playing cards and end up picking up sky scrapers and bridges.

I just like this analogy. If you grew up in a hot climate you might not quite understand this but luckily I grew up in New England and my front yard was a hill.

All snowballs start as a handful of snow.

Basically making a snowman that will hold up for a while you want the biggest snowball as the base. The trick though is to let gravity be your friend. Sometimes if you make a snowball too big and you aren't at the top of the hill you gotta push it up hill and that's no fun, so that one usually ends up being a middle or head snowball. Sometimes if you start too small and roll downhill you just end up with a medium sized snowball too cause it didn't start out big enough. So the key there is to roll as big of a snowball as you can before you roll it down hill. That is the best situation. Gravity is your friend and the snowball forms itself..

Some hills are larger than others. I know in my yard it was a decent hill but it flattened out quickly so a strategy needed to be implemented to maximize snow volume and hill momentum.

Wet snow. OK thats talking about the condition of the snow. How much is there? If it is too light and fluffy it won't stick together. Sometimes you end up with great sticky snow but theres not much of it so you end up with a bunch of grass and dirt in your snowball. If there is tons of wet snow you get snow on snow on snow and a massive snowman that doesn't melt until April!

So that leads me to gme. The blizzard is happening. Its good wet heavy snow and a massive hill. Hedgies are trying to dry up and stop the snow and bulldoze the hill. Hit pieces makes gme roll up the hill. Be Zen and make your snowball and find your starting point. I won't make too many associations I just want people to envision the momentum that is possible.
