With the shareholder's meeting upcoming, funds will likely continue to try to suppress #GME's shareprice. One approach, among several, is to hunt stop losses. They hit a specific price which triggers investors' stop losses. This causes additional downward pressure with no additional effort required on the funds' side. By not using stop losses you can make their job more difficult and costly for them.

Might be red, green, or gray today, but whichever, enjoy the show and remain steadfast.
