I almost royally F'd up. Being new to computershare this year, I was exuberant to be able to go online and easily vote immediately. I thought I was done. I had read about "voting every share", and thought this only related to computershare, since sometimes the shares are in separate batches that get voted on separately (there are other threads about this, if a fellow investor could post in comments that would be great)

But like many of you who are moving to CS, I have shares in multiple brokerages. I have been transferring from Ally, to fudality, to CS. I thought voting through CS would mean my votes as an investor count for all my shares no matter where they are. This was wrong! And obviously so, as we know the CS shares are in my name and the others are not. it's not like each brokerage knows what's going on at the other one also.

I went on ally, saw I hadn't voted. I went on fudality, saw I hadn't voted. I almost missed voting for a large amount of my shares.

SIGN ONTO EVERY BROKER YOU HAVE GME SHARES WITH AND MAKE SURE YOU VOTE!!
