After some back and forth communication with Trading 212, they have finally agreed to start the rollout of in specie transfers.

**For details on how we got to this point, please see my DD post here:** [https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/u1z7bj/cobs\_61h\_forcing\_uk\_brokers\_to\_allow\_outbound/](https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/u1z7bj/cobs\_61h\_forcing\_uk\_brokers\_to\_allow\_outbound/)

Basically though, an 'in specie' transfer is a transfer of a financial instrument (like GME shares) by re-registration of the owner. This would allow the transfer of GME shares to another platform without first liquidating your position.

It would seem like they know they have to provide the service but are dragging their feet. They tried to fob me off with the usual "coming soon" chat but when I said this wasn't in line with FCA regulation, they created a forum post announcing the feature rollout.

**The forum post:****

*Hello everyone,*

*We're launching beta testing of in-specie transfer for ISA accounts. We'll start with transfers towards us.*

*Is anyone interested? If so, send me a DM.*
