Foley's "Bang Bang" catchphrase began in WCW and now Foley has explained its origin. During a recent edition of WWE Untold, Foley discussed where he got the idea from. Here is the quote, courtesy of Fightful:

"I wasn't even aware that I made noises throughout my matches. It just came from my subconscious. Bang Bang had, maybe the most humble of wrestling origins. I dropped an elbow on Nasty Ned Brady in Greensboro, NC, I think it was one day before I lost two top teeth in a car accident. The song from the B-52's, 'Love Shack' went through my mind and I looked up at the camera and said, 'Bang bang bang, on the door baby.' And I never again used 'on the door baby.' The more meaningful and more I believed in the gesture, the better the match was going to be."
