Corporations are not your ally, they have no face, any relationship with a company is insincere at the core. You cannot trust the company as a moral entity, therefore you must treat the company for what it is, a business looking to make profits and exploit your nature to like shiny things. As a private individual you must take the best position you can against the company, you must exploit its weaknesses as a way to protect yourself. The capitalist system is an inherently negative social system and you deserve the right to defend yourself from toxic entities. We must consider the opportune moment to strike back against the system of oppression.

Think of the capitalist system as an immense monster, looking to destroy and consume all in its path. As a cognitive individual, what sword and shield do you have to defend yourself against the Beast?

People on the other hand, are inherently benevolent. Capitally incentivized social structures limit the success of our benevolent nature. We care deeply, at our core, about the good nature and wellbeing of our fellow global citizen. Nature is however, random at its core, as is, the human race. I have as much of a right to be born where I was, while at the same time, I have an equally valid claim that I have no right to be born where I was. Nature is random, our circumstances vary, this affects you randomly and in all ways. Some people enjoy stable lives, most don't.

We are cognitive individuals.

Everyone has a different amount of capital, it's inherent to the system obviously. This has gone to the extreme in the late stages of humanity's long winded and rather boring social capitalist experiment. Neo-Liberal dogma has infected the human brain, we don't need capitalism to remain the way it is or we will die.

It's clear that crony capitalist practices are killing the planet, we will be dead at high rates within 50 years if we don't change our course immediately. Capitalism is lame and boring in its current state. Let's shake it up a bit. You'd be surprised, but it's actually pretty simple to reorganize the capitalist pyramid. Buy, Hold and Register GameStop Shares.

This is not a Reddit subculture, this is not crypt0, this is a group of curious people recognizing the fatal fault in the Death Star (the capitalist system) and are in the trenches. GameStop is real, as a company yes, but as a stock, absolutely.

We are all individual beings of course, but some of us want to recognize on a deeper level that we are part of a collective of cognitively active social creatures living on a paradise sphere. Our individual circumstances are random yes, but our collective circumstance is very much not. We can design and shape the very fabric of our social world. By Buying, Registering, and Holding GameStop shares, we as a species, can expose Hedge Funds and Banks all over the world to infinite downside risk. GameStop becomes your sword and shield against the Beast.

It's simple supply and demand. Hedge Funds made contracts for future demand, we as apes are simply reducing the supply. We have created infinitely reoccurring transaction in the market, of a separation between two positions. Shorting Hedge Funds and Bought Registered Holding Apes.

Why is everyone wasting their hard earned capital on overpriced houses? We already did that in 2008! Put some of that cash into the reorganization of the capitalist market. Using the very system the elites have cultivated.

Why not? It'd be fun!
