Recently there has been some noise and controversy over at r/antiwork and subsequently new subs have formed. In the new sub a user came in to post a (now deleted) rant about interviewing for a mechanical engineering position and getting lowballed. 20 min later he edits the post to say "The company was GameStop". I called BS and now the entire post is deleted. They are going outside our subs to set the narrative to boycott investing and shopping. That is precisely the goal when you post on activist subs.
