I DRS'd my GME shares like 6 months ago. (Before all of the comments start rolling in, I'm not interested in any debates; each investor should do what they are comfortable with doing. Not financial advise, just common sense.) I continued to buy dips here and there but I didn't DRS these. I was very comfortable with my decision and everything was fine.

Then Monday morning happened...

I no longer had that comfortable feeling I had become accustomed. I am not sure exactly what happened but it was a clear indicator that as long as there are shares in the DTCC, nothing is going to change.

I have now started the transfer to DRS the rest and I have restored that comfortable feeling I was beginning to miss.
