Got a text this morning from a random number asking if I was still looking for a real estate agent. I have not been in the market for about 8 years now, and when I was looking it was very brief and did not last long. They must be really desperate to sell homes to go back 8 years and scrape my number out of their contacts. Just another hint that the DD is solid, and it looks like the housing market is going down. GME is the hedge, DRS you fools!
