Hello apes & apettes

One of my friends texted me today wanting to learn about the whole GME thing. I found out that I'm sort of too smooth to really break down the whole story concisely for him. I linked all the relevant subs to him but it's a huge rabbit hole. I don't really know which points are the 'essence' (except buy, hold, drs) and where a potentially new ape would even start. So I was wondering... Is there some specific lightweight reading summary/DD suitable for someone without ANY stock market experience I can send him that both gives an overview of the history as well as meaningfully summarize the most important points about what exactly is happening and why?

He did buy one share now as a 'lottery ticket' (after I told him I'd buy a case of beer for him if it doesn't work out) but he wants to get more informed.

Cheers!

(didn't know which flair is appropriate so I went with Discussion...)
