

Title: If my only method of getting shares direct registered is to purchase them (I'm in U.K.) is it better for me to hold what I have or sell and buy back direct?

Author: Crhallan

Created 2021-09-19 10:49:38 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/pr5qjg/if_my_only_method_of_getting_shares_direct/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/pr5qjg/if_my_only_method_of_getting_shares_direct/

As title. If we're so massively oversold, is it better that I simply sell my holdings and then use the cash to buy directly? Or should I just keep what I have rather than allowing shorts to cover? I appreciate that mine is a very small drop in an ocean, but I also appreciate that if a lot of people do the same it all adds up.

I don't expect financial advice and won't take it as such; I'm curious as to what you'd do in my situation...