

Title: History on GameStop dividends and why q4 lines up as a potential date

Author: channelgary

Created 2021-09-01 01:18:27 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/pfjdn8/history_on_gamestop_dividends_and_why_q4_lines_up/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/pfjdn8/history_on_gamestop_dividends_and_why_q4_lines_up/

Hi apes, one of your smoothest here.

I was doing some historical look ups on gme and dividends. Historically upon announcement of a divi the date of record is +2 weeks. And it is paid around +4 weeks after announcement. This seems consistent.

<https://www.nasdaq.com/market-activity/stocks/gme/dividend-history>

Let's assume Sep 8 (earnings call) is the date it is announced. You could expect the date of record to be ~22nd September. That means as long as you own shares by that date you would be entitled to a dividend.

Another 2 weeks later it has tended to be paid. So we could be looking at 1st-2nd week of October to receive a dividend.

This lines up with loopring's 4th quarter customer and also their recent moon tweet.