You have received the allocated shares from your custody account at IBKR from DTC. In other words the split has been distributed as instructed by GameStop describes on the URL above?

New shares have been issued via the depository. They have been received by our intermediary, credited to our account and subsequently passed on to all eligible clients

Great, and the intermediary who received the allocated shares and credited them to your account is IBKR, correct?

Yes, our intermediary broker is IBKR.

Thank you. One final question, could you explain what is meant by eligible clients in this specific case?

Hello, Thank you for reaching out!

Hi, thank you for being available at such a late hour

I just wanted you to have a quick look at the statement GameStop has just put out

<https://news.gamestop.com/stock-split/?n>

Allow me a few moments to have a look for you, please.

I was wondering how you have been instructed to handle the split and I understand it is just instructions you received, but obviously as a stockholder I have been advised by the company to reach out to my broker to clarify

Sure thing

In a nutshell, I am referring to clients, which were eligible for participating in the event (holding shares on ex-date and etc.)

So basically all clients that met the requirements to be eligible for the split via dividend as outlined by GameStop received the extra shares via the method you have kindly explained for me?

Yes, that is correct. The event was executed as per all specifics, mentioned above.

Thank you so much for answering my questions completely. I am relieved to hear this corporate action was applied as instructed by GameStop.

May I be of help with something else, please?
