Peter Hann CFA back in 2021 Powell was playing the political card, his main goal was a second term nomination as the chair of the FED.

In order to achieve this, he kept saying that inflation was transitory the entire year, even though every statistic was pointing to the opposite side.

The worst part, if you take some time to dig what's really going on we know that 2008 wasn't solved, they are really kicking the can down the road. The question is: how long they still can do this?

We know that Hedge Funds collateral are melting day by day, the money that was supposed to help people and small business during the pandemic was used to over leverage in the market and it seems the margin call time is about to burst.
