

Title: Do you really think you can beat Ken "CBOE in my fucking kitchen" Griffin at the options game? We don't need anything else, we have the answer already: DRS

Author: mountainextension

Created 2022-01-07 17:25:03 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/rycoeq/do_you_really_think_you_can_beat_ken_cboe_in_my/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/rycoeq/do_you_really_think_you_can_beat_ken_cboe_in_my/

Idk about you guys, but to me, this week has reeked of nothing but SHF bullshit.

First, the Charles Gradante video. Why the fuck would we start trusting HF managers now? Because they say a few things we've known for a year? I'm not saying there's not some interesting stuff in there, but if you watch that video, he does nothing but say options were the reason for the squeeze in January and encourage buying calls for the first 5 min. Then, he goes on to subtly imply that retail is immoral and it all ended in January.

This isn't a smoking gun, it's a trap.

No one knows who Charles Gradante is. No one who isn't in this saga already would see that video and think, "Well, if renowned Wallstreet professional that I haven't heard of Charles Gradante says the squeeze a year ago was a result of options, I better buy some calls now".

That was aimed at us. It seems pretty clear to me that someone wants the GME sub and VVSB crowds to YOLO into calls under the guise that we'll push them into another squeeze situation like last year. I have no idea what those cunts at Citadel have up their sleeve, but do you really think they would let themselves be caught in another gamma squeeze like last year? These people are fucking smart, they are not repeating that mistake.

Then, you have the fake MSM NFT marketplace news drop with accompanying price spike. I think that little piece of work did a few things:

- * Helped provide plausible reason for a spike in price resulting from someone having to cover or otherwise purchase shares from the market.
- * Dampen the impact the real announcement would have.
- * Make people think the announcement was already priced in.
- * Gave them a foothold to start spreading negative sentiment about NFTs and GameStop not delivering if they continue to take their time.

They have been heavily on their bullshit this week. To me though, it's beginning to feel desperate. They're conceding that an NFT marketplace is coming and that we were right about last January, not because they want to, but because they have to.

You think they'd be pushing this hard for options if they didn't need the premiums? You think they want to admit an NFT marketplace is on the horizon after they've been calling it a dying brick and mortar all year? Fuck no. This is plan B or C or D or whatever. The best they can do now without any further info from Gamestop is continue to shit on RC and team for not having a plan/executing and vaguely shit on NFTs for being useless.

We have them by the balls but we don't have unlimited time. You see how they will fight this at every step of the way. They will drag this out as long as it takes, while they buy up reddit to influence censorship on the platform and legislate for rules that allow brokers to keep shares out of our names. I believe this is their long term plan.

We're currently winning the race, but make no mistake, we are in a race.

DRS YOUR SHARES IF YOU THINK THAT'S WHAT'S BEST AS AN INDIVIDUAL INVESTOR.