Guys and gals, fellow investors, beloved apes. When you see the price dropping like this it's easy to let the fear, uncertainty and doubt creep in. It can make you anxious that you may have made the wrong decision. Especially if, maybe, you're a bit new to this.

Fear not though, trust your gut instinct. You backed the right man with RYAN COHEN riding the stallion that is the one and only game changing GAMESTOP.

Remember these points.

- Massive amount of cash with next to no debt
- They've got a stack of executives and leading managers from other massively successful companies to come and join them. These guys could have gone anywhere or stayed where they were but they chose to come here.
- No one is selling. I'm not, and I know you're not.
- The guys on the wrong side of this are beyond treading on thin ice, they are literally drowning.
- If they drop this price too low, we'll have the float locked and sorted by the end of the week, maybe even the afternoon.
- Maybe they're trying to scare us off, create tensions between us regarding options etc, talking smack about our beloved company and the future in the press. This changes nothing. Gamestop is going to change everything, bit by bit.

Have faith. Keep going. Keep trusting that we're all holding because you're holding. None of this is Financial Advice but I wouldn't trust my money anywhere at this stage.

Keep DRS'ing your shares if you can. If you can't register your existing shares just sit tight and don't stress too much. But get any new ones through computershare.

Everything will be worth it in the end.
