APES! I am curious what the start of your story will be that you share with the generations to come in your family!? Here is a glimpse of mine:

I have to share the start of my story as I feel it's important. I first invested in GME as a result of reading an article on 2/4/2021 that told the story of RH turning off the buy button. I was so pressed when I read that article, that I immediately logged into my brokerage account and saw that I had a little over $60 cash sitting there that I could use right away. I pulled up GME and bought my first share for $59 bucks! For the cost of a video game, I was able to give back to a company that had brought me so much entertainment and memories over the years. That one share would forever be held and this was before I really knew anything about diamond hands, apes, and all the crazy good groups here on Reddit.

A few months pass and I start reading up on this entire thing in much, much more detail. I discover DD and then decide that I would invest in several of the stocks that had the button turned off to diversify my portfolio, if you will. As time passed, I became a XXX holder in GME and several other stocks that had the button turned off. I also started to learn that GME was the place I wanted to continue investing in while retaining my other holdings. In all honesty, this was all due to the DD, DFV, and RC. Now, I grab some of anything GME or RC is into as a matter of principal and I invest all I can every paycheck into GME. Yes, I am and do DRS as well!

I will work on this story over time and pass it along to my generations of family to come. I encourage you all to do the same as well. On another note, I managed to show another the way to the moon this past weekend. They bought 10 shares yesterday under $100!

Note: None of this is finical advice. Just an APE sharing the start of his story and his liking of the STOCK!
