

Title: How many shares you bought doesn't determine your commitment to GME, here's why...

Author: ZombieFaye

Created 2022-04-01 20:48:24 UTC

Permalink: /r/GME/comments/tu1437/how_many_shares_you_bought_doesnt_determine_your/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/GME/comments/tu1437/how_many_shares_you_bought_doesnt_determine_your/

X shares, XX shares, XXX+ shares, its all relative. For those of you watching the upcoming explosion fueled by Ryan cohen and his decisions, maybe you're kicking yourself for not getting more shares. You're not committed unless all the chips are down...

...but that's not what you should be concerned about. You help in different ways. DD, spreading important information and analysis, telling people close to you why and how GME is going the way it is.

Why you first bought a share when you heard about this should be the same reason that you're holding right now.

I can't tell you what that reason is. Nobody can.

But why did I hold?

I held because I have a very pathetic job with a very mediocre life. I don't want to be right about GME exploding and rub it in to my friends, I want to be financially stable. I want to help teach others about how to make decisions so they don't stress about money, corruption, broken systems and soul crushing jobs.

I applied for so many jobs, so many positions, I've prayed to every god including ones I don't believe in, asking the world for a chance.

But I'm not going to get my chance that I want.

When GME came up, I saw a chance that I could finally take for such a low price. I made a gamble and that gamble slowly turned more and more realistic as the past two years slogged by. I'm a proud XX holder. When GME finally moons, I want to pay back any and all of the people that helped me get here, and live my life without the weight of the horrible job I work.

The CEO of my company was complaining that the hedgies weren't letting anyone have fun a few years ago.

This is coming from the guy who drives multiple sports cars while his company mashes people through the meat grinder on a daily basis. Turnover rate is skyrocketing, over 500% with a recent mass firing.

Hope. Courage. DD. All of these things will help us change for the people around us. The one guy who's homeless in WSB, others who are helping dying animals or who have been laid off of work...

And losers like me.

If this truly is over in the matter of a year, when it finally squeezes after all of this time...

Remember why you bought, and what you're selling for. Others would kill to get this chance like we have.

Don't become like the hedgies we hate. Remember where you came from, your broke and humble little beginnings. Help fix this world for the better, all of us collectively may be able to have a financial edge over all the baby boomers who ruined the economy in the first place, and take siege of the corrupt systems that are in place today.

HOLD.

DRS.

BELIEVE.

Can't stop....

Won't stop.

GAMESTOP.