I'm going to say that it's interesting because N302AK landed at 2 AMish on the 16th in London, where he was until the 18th when he went to Monaco, where he has been going lately. Then of course he flew from Monaco to London, then back to the USA.

At first I thought maybe they were all in a live meeting which would have been interesting because if they were in a live meeting it could mean that their travel to these locations before could have been meetings with the same officials. Some other apes had even mentioned him meeting with Chinese officials as a possibility which is interesting as hell given the shit going on with Evergrande.

u/cruxhub brought to my attention that it was said to have been a virtual roundtable, however I still would wager there could be a chance of some being in person, and some attending virtually as we see with congressional meetings.

I am going to link the article....but I'm going to fucking copy and paste the article here because this shit is important. Look at who the fuck is in attendance.

>Chinese financial regulators and Wall Street executives discussed pursuing transparency and long-term stability at a top-level virtual meeting amid rising market turmoil and political tension.

>The three-hour meeting of the China-U.S. Financial Roundtable on Thursday included the head of the People's Bank of China, and executives from Goldman Sachs Group Inc., Citadel and other Wall Street powerhouses, according to people familiar with the talks, who asked not be named because the meeting was private.

>The meeting marked the resumption of the roundtable that was first convened in September 2018. Global investors have been unnerved by a regulatory onslaught from Beijing targeting its biggest technology companies and other industries as well as a push by President Xi Jinping to create "common prosperity." Billions of dollars in potential profits are at stake for Wall Street, which has been expanding in China as the nation opens its financial markets to investment banks, wealth and money managers.

>Attendees included Ken Griffin from Citadel, Abby Johnson from Fidelity Investments, Blackrock Inc.'s Larry Fink, Blackstone Inc. Chairman Stephen Schwarzman and John Waldron, Goldman's president, among others, the people said.

> Media representatives at all the firms declined to comment.

> China Securities Regulatory Commission Vice Chairman Fang Xinghai, PBOC Governor Yi Gang, and Guo Shuqing, chairman of the China Banking and Insurance Regulatory Commission, were invited from the Chinese side.

What the fuck? Media at ALL firms declined to comment? What the fuck?

Also....people "familiar with the talks". That is fucking plural. With an 's' at the end. For you smooth brained apes that means happening on more than one occasion. Which makes it even more apparent that the similarity in travel and meetings on this flight could correlate to other travel patterns.

Also note that no where does this state that this is a government level meeting. Note who fucking pushed it and who was in attendance.

How the fuck is this not economic espionage?
