Is it not odd that GME consistently closes on double-zeroes or is "adjusted" to double-zeroes shortly after close (like today, $131.00?) Do other stocks do this? When people try to counter that GME isn't being manipulated, how come this isn't front-and-center as an example of manipulation? How come there's not a "double-zeros" guy who posts the "double-zeroes amount" that we close on everyday? Am I CRAZY?!

AND WHILE WE'RE AT IT: GME also appears (to me) to make a considerable amount of double-zero pit stops throughout the day.
