After spending hours of my day on Live Chat and on Hold with Customer Service Reps...

According to Computershare.com -> Investor Login to Investor Center -> Manage Investment Plans -> View Plans -> Documents -> Plan Brochure (View and Print) -> Item 10. Corporate Actions

* "10. Corporate Actions

Any shares issued pursuant to a stock dividend or stock split on shares held in a Participant's DirectStock account or shares registered in the name of the Participant will be credited to the Participant's DirectStock account, provided that such shares are of the same type, class and series as the shares held under DirectStock. Processing of purchases, sales and transfers may be temporarily suspended during such distributions or other corporate actions. If the Company makes available to its shareholders any rights to subscribe to additional shares, debentures or other securities, the number of rights to be issued to a Participant shall be based on the number of whole shares held for a Participant under DirectStock and the number of whole shares of the same class of stock otherwise registered in the name of the Participant, unless otherwise instructed by the Company."

According with the Computershare Call Center Supervisor (Rude AF), in line with the above Statement, it does not matter if your DRSED (Computershare) Gamestop Class A Common Stock is in Book or Plan. You will receive the Stock Dividends of Class A Common Stock to your Computershare Account as initiated by Gamestop in the event of a Dividend or Split via Dividend of Stock.

**TL;DR:** Book or Plan in Computershare, you will receive your Class A Stock Dividends from Gamestop in the form of Stock so long as you hold Class A Stock of Gamestop.
