So I was watching this youtube video

(<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gk6B11zV3-Y>)(<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gk6B11zV3-Y>)

about failure to delivers (FTDs) and the relationship with subsequent stock price, and I decided to examine this with SAVA.

So I went to the SEC website (<https://sec.report/fails.php?tc=sava>)(<https://sec.report/fails.php?tc=sava>) and typed in SAVA. Once entered, you can see the number of FTDs and the stock price plotted in a chart.

The first peak in FTD (over 3.2M shares of SAVA had failed to deliver back in Dec 9, 2019). You can see the jump in stock price shortly after that... but let me remind you of what the stock price was before 2020.

The stock price on Dec 9, 2019 closed at $1.88 and then the stock price jumped to just under $10 a few weeks later.

The next FTD peak was on Nov 16, 2020.... then the stock price gradually went up in January.

Where are the next set of FTDs?

It's interesting it looks similar to this FTD chart of this other stock too. Obviously Gamestop (GME) has more failure to delivers prior to the January spike, but similar to SAVA, the FTDs are no longer there.

The youtuber Charlie's Vids speculates that the FTDs are hidden through ETFs (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SMSkAi5zicU>)(<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SMSkAi5zicU>)).

The same thing can be said of SAVA. Shorters may be shorting SAVA through ETFs.

Remember Michael Burry's tweet of the correlation between SAVA and GME?
