It's entirely plausible that SHFs have divided retail into 3 factions now. GME, baths, and popcorns so that we cannot unite together and end this. They'll pop each one periodically, 1 more-so than the other (with all others following behind of course), and that generates new followers for the aforementioned front-running stock.

These clans are rabidly loyal, though some investors dabble in both or all. Typically though, there can only be one. Divided, it's easier for shfs to kick the can, easier to spread FUD, spreads out buying pressure, confuses, and segregates.

This could all be over much quicker if we could find a way to unite. To me, GME is the best and easiest way. This is the clan that should unite. Primarily because of our already established DRS numbers. That being said, I think any could do it, if we did it together. This isn't a bath or popcorns bashing post. It's just a thought, that's surely been brought up before, but should be discussed now. We are close. We need to unite as ■■
