

Title: The Great Divergence

Author: melloefelloe

Created 2022-02-09 22:28:27 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/sopuaf/the_great_divergence/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/sopuaf/the_great_divergence/

It's pretty obvious that the price action for GME and popcorn are highly correlated. Some, notably everybody's favourite Pomeranian, u/criand, have theorized that these stocks and many others are being manipulated via a basket of "meme stocks". While this theory seems very plausible, it doesn't account for why popcorn ran up about 700% in June when GME hasn't seen anything similar since January 2021. I've been searching around for an answer, but haven't found a convincing explanation. Anyone here have thoughts about this?