We have MULTIPLE brokers around the world who freely admit that they did NOT get any shares to give out as a dividend, but have KNOWINGLY treated this as a "stock split" and divided all of their shareholders previously existing GME shares by 4.

Oh, they done FUCKED UP!

RC's clause to remove GME off of the exchange for failure to execute to the company's instructions seems to be in play now.

But who takes the fall? The DTCC, who never even had CLOSE to enough shares to actually cover what was needed for a 4 to 1 stock dividend, or is this on the brokers, who either ignorantly or intentionally just chopped up a bunch of apes shares into quarters without ever actually getting the shares? (Which isn't that the argument against brokers in the first place, that they've never really actually had the shares?)

Any wrinklebrains able to analyze all this?
