1. Fintel shows 87% decrease (sell) of position from Blackrock and vanguard recently (87% per institution) -- verify by yourself if you want from fintel.■
2. Coincidence? Cohen empties out 100%? Right after big funds pulling out 87%?
3. In order for Blackrock and vanguard to have 87% for sale, those were returned first.. then sold at market to hopium retail.
4. Based on current amount of shares sold, it is highly unlikely that reg sho will cause any pump beyond what we saw.. if even pump happens because -----
5. So much available now in market through block sells. Short sellers even if they wanted to return, which they won't because after close today price went from 11 to 9. This move is not done by retail and I won't be surprised if another fund dumped today.

Closing notes:

I have been a GME ape since 2021 February. And during my time, the bastille day theory hype costed many people money.

Sure, REG sho pumped GME in 2021 january. But that is because a. Cohen jumped in and it had a future.

This is opposite.

Gamble, at your own risk. And don't blame papa Gensler for losing money. I had enough of superstonk sensorship from people countering their garbage hypes.

Godspeed, I welcome counter to my DD and constructive discussion in comments.■
