To everyone having trouble with Fidelity DRS

 Speculation / Opinion

Moderators remove posts from feeds for a variety of reasons, including keeping communities safe, civil, and true to their purpose.

If they make you request a compliance officer in order to process your DRS request, I feel like we should hold Fidelity accountable for doing so.

If they want to directly lie to us and try to bypass market laws by refusing to process DRS requests, each chat transcript should be collected and submitted to the FBI and DOJ as evidence of them intentionally/illegally denying requests and providing false information to discourage DRS transfers.

This is more criminal fuckery and should be reported. If you have had any problems yourself and have evidence of it, a large collection of people submitting this as evidence would show this was an organized attempt by whoever can order around those in the DRS department to violate securities law by denying requests.

We shouldn't have to threaten to call cops (request compliance officer) in order for Fidelity to do their job. But we should report them when they choose to willfully violate securities laws by denying requests for no reason and spreading lies about it.

What will be done about it? Probably nothing, but at least we will have created a paper trail that they are doing this.
