I think it would behoove us to expand our efforts on other platforms. We have 41k apes on average stroking their meat looking for some way to help fight the good fight. There is a lot we can accomplish if we think outside the box just like with the r/place co-op we can put our efforts to do great things to help us reach extreme highs faster.

I have many ideas like I've been on different platforms and reddit subs trying to convince Tesla and other relevant stonks to Direct register their shares. How I believe this helps GME is the less wallstreet can manipulate the market as a whole the less money they will make and the less they can impact our stonk. There is a reality that we don't give wallstreet enough credit for how well they can manipulate the market. If they lose say 100 billion from shorting gamestop they can make that money back from shorting other stocks and minimize their loss. We may be further from extreme highs than we realize no one really knows. But if a large portion of the stock market Direct Register their shares I believe that will make extreme highs 100% inevitable and more in our grasp. I realized really quickly that just like us a year ago no one is aware of how much direct registering shares help to halt market manipulation and how much it hurts wallstreet. If we think larger scale we are sure to benefit its a win win in my eyes.

I have also been liking Gamestop posts and commenting showing how excited we are for the company and its efforts. I think if they receive the amount of support that we have in here it'll be good press and shows that the company has a lot of excitement behind it that the public can see and the media can't silence. We can go steps further by participating in conversations and liking posts that have to do with GME and related topics on twitter it is the town square and does shape perception. I have been going as far as leaving comments on political pages informing people to direct register and anyone that talks about stocks and I receive a lot of feedback just from doing it alone. People are interested and genuinely want to do something to change things for the better, everyone has a vested interest in seeing things become better. I just put the information out there randomly and people read it and think is this real and reply back with what is direct registering and do brokers really register my shares in their name to manipulate my investment. People really have no idea this is even a possibility and just like us they get very upset and want to do something about it know that they know what to do. Do some research to make sure you understand what you are putting out there but don't be afraid to get things wrong and to learn and adjust as you go along. As long as you keep learning and changing what you got wrong than you will get it right within a short amount of time.

If we all put our minds together and think of clever ways to halt wallstreet's progress we should put the effort in doing so because we will benefit greatly. We have a great opportunity to take advantage of the next coming months before the split to impact short sellers the best we can so when the split happens hedge funds are truly without any question FUCKED..!!
