I have been an avid fan of Gamestop since my childhood and have been working to build an investment portfolio for a long while. I am currently being choked out by medical bills and gas/food prices due to low traffic in my car sales job (caused by inflation fears) to protect my family I've had to begin liquidating my shares remaining in my second broker. I have a small stash on computershare that I will probably have to break into soon. Has anyone else been falling on these same difficulties I don't see many posts like this. It has been a wild ride my friends and I hope to find some extra work and rebuild my portfolio before the rocket goes off. Til then good luck everyone.
