I know it's mostly a joke but often it seems like it's not. Guys (and presumably girls, but the joke doesn't work as well) talking about how once GME takes off, they'll be leaving their significant other in favor of dating celebrities and supermodels.

But really, don't wait. Why would you? If you're going to dump your current partner once you're rich, why are you still with them now? You're obviously not invested in the relationship, so do everyone involved a favor and end it now.

Besides, waiting till after your spaceship comes in to break up just gives them a better chance at taking some of it for themselves. The sooner you've ended it, the more chance you have to keep everything for yourself.

The only time it makes sense is if you are in a position where you cannot be without someone else in a relationship, no matter who they are. In that case, you probably have issues going on that outrageous amounts of money aren't going to resolve anyways.

Again, I know it's mostly a joke, this is for the people who are actually serious about it. Not Relationship Advice.
