

Title: What are some non-MOASS end game scenarios?

Author: Section741

Created 2022-03-04 19:52:02 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/t6rc68/what_are_some_nonmoass_end_game_scenarios/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/t6rc68/what\_are\_some\_nonmoass\_end\_game\_scenarios/

Let's assume that a lot of the DD is true and MOASS is coming. I believe that the SEC would not let MOASS happen even if it was 100% fair game. All markets could collapse and it would be the end of capitalism as we know it. The SEC would be in deep shit, especially since they knew in advance that it was coming. Also, with all the other things going on it would pose a significant national security threat. The way I see it, we're in a scenario where all participants are willing to cooperate because the alternative is the Tsar Bomba going off in the stock market (which would spread to other markets). This includes all of Wall Street, SEC, FED, FBI, DOJ, and anyone else in government. On the other hand, I also doubt they would let everyone get off free because a lot of the DD casts doubt on the integrity of our markets and doing so could also jeopardize long term trust in markets.

I'll start:

One possibility is that they find someone to buy Gamestop at an elevated valuation. There would probably be some backroom deals to guarantee it is not unprofitable. Many apes would be upset but I think most would be relieved that this situation is finally over. Also, most would walk away with some profits so there isn't too much to complain about (aside from all the fraud). It might also be in the best interest of the company acquiring Gamestop since most companies would suffer in the event of a complete market collapse. The hedge funds shorting GME would lose some money but would not completely collapse. This seems like an acceptable ending to the saga where the bad players lose a bit and the apes gain a bit. The important thing is that it minimizes collateral damage to the rest of the market.

Please let me know why this is idiotic and present alternatives. I'm just trying to brainstorm possible scenarios. I was expecting big price movements this past month from OpEx, DOOMPs, and ETF FTDs but it seems some weird shit is being done to prevent it. At this point I think it's possible that actual crime is being committed to "protect" markets (themselves). This is making me consider paper handing because if we have to play by the rules and they don't, then anything is possible and no matter how much math we do it won't matter.

Side note: After I posted some DD a few weeks back I started getting unusual views in some social media sites and saw some unrecognized vehicles near my residence. Some people know who I am so just fyi I would never commit suicide or murder anyone.