

Title: The Most Famous Trade in History. The Simplest Trade in History.

Author: keyser_squoze

Created 2021-09-16 19:07:32 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/ppjspg/the_most_famous_trade_in_history_the_simplest/

Url:

https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/ppjspg/the_most_famous_trade_in_history_the_simplest/

This trade was always simple. What's changed is that now it has an endgame WITH NO DATES. Please follow me, step by step, and if you disagree, that's cool!

*Step 1: Buy n hodl. Check. This gave the hodler a sense of ownership in a company they loved with a stock they liked. The buyer n hodler knew that the other side of the trade was lying, hiding shares, counterfeiting, defrauding, and that buyer/hodler stood up and said NO. Very American stuff. Very European stuff. Very HUMAN stuff. All People Equal stuff.

*Step 2: Votl back in April. Check. This did nothing except expose GME leadership to a rough idea of the level of fraud that's been perpetrated with their shares. This likely caused them to a) introduce language in their SEC filings warning of a short squeeze and b) likely caused them to include language in their SEC filings saying, um, if there's proof that the DTCC is defrauding people and screwing with our company's value, we'll be forced to leave the ~~SEC~~ DTCC. That little tidbit likely was pre-ordained with a little heart-to-heart that RC and GG needed to have, that likely went something along the lines of:

RC: Dude, they're selling the stock of my company knowing full well that they're way beyond the available amount of shares but they keep doing it anyway.

GG: Dude, I know. They have to put some rules in place so that when they stop doing it, it doesn't screw up everything.

RC: Dude, that means they're like addicts, and they need to ween themselves off of synthetic shares?

GG: Dude. Sort of.

RC: Dude, can I quit the DTCC if they don't quit stealing from my company?

RC Lawyer: Dude, you have to warn people that you might do that first, right GG?

GG: Dude, that sounds right.

RC: Dude, we're going to warn about all of this in our next filing, mmmmkay bruh?

GG: Dude. Mmmkay.

*Step 3: Hodl thru massive fuckery. Check.

*Step 4: Watch CFTC as they basically say, yeah, that stealing thing that they do, that you caught them doing, we're not going to do anything about that. This gets buyer/hodlers very put out, with good reason, because once again, NO RULE OF LAW.

*Step 5: Make claim of ownership. It'd been brought up before. Buyer/hodlers are an easily distracted and somewhat surly lot, so, they were rightfully skeptical of the idea. ComputerShare? What is this, a retail store from 1980? But the more research done, the more it becomes clear. Buyer/hodlers can register their shares in their name, and, once the float is locked, welp, any shorting that happens after that is IRREFUTABLY FRAUDULENT SHARES BEING SHORTED. Which, you know, is kind of a big deal and um, makes it even more clear that short side of trade is in prisoner's dilemma (if they're not already on death row awaiting execution, which, they probably are.)

*Step 6: Hodl. Maybe more buying, just because GME as a long-term play is STILL CHEAP. Hodl some more. Media begs the buyer/hodler to sell. Buyer/hodler doesn't, is demonized as someone who isn't serious. The buyer/hodler is being asked to justify actions, is told they're making a mockery of the system, when in fact, that buyer/hodler IS THE ONLY serious person in the conversation.

*Step 7: MOASS. Dance if you want to. Or don't dance if you want to. It's America, or Europe, you live under democratic rule (for now) and you can do what you want. And while it happens, remember that...in the middle of all of this, there was TONS of research, reading, sharing, cajoling, speculating, tears, laughs, anger, excitement... all of it rooted in one thing. Remember that thing I wrote before?

The GME buyer/hodler stood up and said NO. No to counterfeiting, said no to theft, said no to robber baron bullshit and said no to a completely fraudulent system.

*Step 8: Watch the movie, and complain about all the stuff they got wrong. Watch the documentaries, and smile while you remember what it was like to be living/not watching the movie.

*Step 9: Decades pass, and you're asked what it was like to be part of the greatest, most famous trade in history. And you say, in the end, it was actually unbelievably simple.

EDIT: Here's a post made earlier today outlining how to claim ownership of those shares you bought! Register the shares as something you own because, um, you DO OWN THEM!

https://www.reddit.com/r/Superstonk/comments/pmsq3u/transferring_shares_to_computershare_a_stepbystep/?utm_source=reddit&utm_medium=usertext&utm_name=Superstonk&utm_content=t1_hcz4ij2