Gamestop has an NFT Marketplace and their website is:

#NFT.GAMESTOP.COM

###just incase you didn't know that.

After reading their recent announcement... Something just clicked.

Yes the NFT Marketplace is a Marketplace for NFTs.

But that doesn't mean you can't meet up here in say oh I don't know, the Gamestop Metaverse perhaps?

Let's face it, we aren't all jumping on Zoom (What is this ancient video conferencing technology you speak of) and Skype (what??) isn't worth singing up for.

Virtual signifies being there, not physically in person but in spirit being there, say in the form of an avatar (Ape perhaps?) , a large banana or diamond, or let's keep shit simple, your GME/NFT wallet.

Now I know not everyone has a wallet, and the Gamestop wallet is yet to be announced officially or released but that's fine because everyone still gets to vote and no doubt in my mind they'll still broadcast via their YouTube channel.

But those who want to visit the virtual world of the Gamestop ASM, then get logging into your wallets and click that virtual meeting link they send you to whisk you away to their Metaverse where you get to enjoy amazing music play whilst you browse a museum of memes handpicked by the chairman before accessing the virtual meeting room.

Right I'm going back to my research now for my first ever upcoming DD.

Feel free to spitball your ideas and criticisms below.

I will add a disclaimer : heavy emphasis on the word could in the title.

TL:DR

It's not that long! eew eew llams I ■
