I bought three shares GME after the initial "price jump" happened (for some reason I can't say s-q-u-e-e-z-e ??) and bought into the hype that I was gonna be able to unload them for triple what I paid, in reality it's been over a year and I'm down 58% with no revival to be seen. I'm still gonna hold - when you're this deep in the hole, there's no point in selling - but is there any steam left in this engine? Or am I just stuck with a huge loss for the rest of my life?
