This was the last 'straw' - r/superstonk is not only a wet dream for anyone who is looking for the wildest exaggeration of the truth but now people are actually eating jars of mayonnaise. Mental health was hurt for a year from following that sub and now people are literally eating half-gallons of lard and thinking it's funny.

I don't know, I think that is getting a bit out of hand. Sticking with my OG sub on r/GME. I have sent some people I know there to check out some stuff posted and written, but why in the world would I want anyone to link me with that subreddit. All they do is hurt the credibility of others by doing this, kind of sad actually.
