It just dawned on me that hedgies are so FKD, there are so many things on the GME side that they don't only not have a way out, they are naked, afraid and cornered.

I have heard a lot about "RC is being quiet" or "there is no forward guidance, stock going to fast 20" and so on with the bitching on MSM or shills, but it just hit me like a train that this is the best thing that can happen against the people that think "I don't care how much it cost, just get it done" you can't do shit if you don't know the next move of your opponent, hedgies are on the crosshair, they have a lot of APEs that are dissecting every move they make, trying to figure out what they are doing or what they can/will do with what they find, the market is down, margin requirements should be changing as I write this, uncertainty is at its highest, and the fact that RC was quiet from the start makes him and the board a wild card

GME is changing A LOT, the regular market place is changing, the e-commerce division is changing, RC has a ton of experience with e-commerce so he knows what works and what doesn't, the world is getting a new NFT marketplace with very little gas fees thanks to GME, Ramp announced 0 commission for ETH purchases for L2 to be deposited on the GME wallet (it is a promotion, most likely for the iPhone release of the wallet), there is a pending announcement of a stock split and this last part is the nuke that can obliterate hedgies if they try to make a sneeze again.

Think about it for a second, the board talked directly to regular retail investors like you or me on the investor meeting, and while the meeting was mostly lawyer talk, they also said something along the lines of "the stock split will be pondered over, and announced on the most opportune time for our investors" (I'm too smooth to remember properly) and while yes there is a case for it being a value proposition for new retail investors of a stock split in the price that the stock is right now, it is not the best proposition for GME itself as a company, I like the company, I like the stock and I want it this transformation to succeed, so I have to think like someone that has not read the DD for a sec, I know it is blasphemy but stick with me for a moment, right now a stock split would look bad, it dilutes the value of the investment that I would be doing, without talking about the ■ show the market is right now, I don't know that the split will be a dividend, I only know that MSM is willing to tell me, and you can bet your ass MSM won't say shit about the split being a dividend or hide it on the last paragraph of the article, I go to the mall and the GME stores have always been there, in the same way that Sears or Toy's R Us was, I think that retail is dying because Amazon is a thing and I saw the fall of all the old retail places, also GME sells games, who buys those discs anymore? I tell to myself while thinking that GME could be the next to fall, there was also some talk about the sneeze last year and MSM is not really talking about GME on TV so nothing must be going on, and then after I get home I see MSM saying something about a split? It must be a desperate cash grab.

Now, let me change the perspective, let's say GME runs for 200 or 300 and the splivident is announced, things look way different, the company is skyrocketing, a split in the middle of a run will give me a chance to get in the action, I see the graph that MSM puts on the screen, it's all green, the market is red and there is a dividend announced?! Where do I sign to get in? I get into google and search for GME, in between the results I suddenly see that the announcement of the split is not only 7:1 it is also a dividend?!!!! Why didn't I knew about this???? What is going on???????? I get into my broker and try to get into the action, but who knows if I will be able to get in and I start to wish I knew before, when the stock was cheaper and I could afford it easily.

With this, things change a lot, don't they?

This is something that is likely to happen to more than one person, or to happen to the ones that think the GME play is no more than a conspiracy. The rocket is loaded and on the platform, we are just waiting for the weather to clear before lift off ■■■■■■■■■■

TL;DR The splivend is the nuke that will obliterate hedgies if they try a new sneeze, so no sneeze is possible, RC and the board being quiet is what makes this possible, the rocket is loaded and the target is Uranus so buckle up ■■■
