If your feel GME is being heavily shorted:

Wes Christian posted this and is asking that investors take just a few minutes to do this if you feel you have reason to believe that your company is being heavily shorted.

For reference: <https://youtu.be/7cW7UPvmahQ>

The objective of the correspondence is to provide GameStop with legal fodder with which to pursue the manipulation of their stock as they deem appropriate. I believe shareholders in the company would like them to implement strategies and take actions that best support their stated mandate 'Delighting Customers and Delivering Value for Stockholders'. However, sometimes they are limited or restricted in what they themselves can initiate.

I have emailed GameStop with the following:

>To the CEO/Board/President of GameStop

>

>Dear Sir(s) / Madame(s):

>

>I am a direct registered shareholder of GameStop.

>

>After reviewing certain public trading data, reported short interest, price and related data points, it is clear to me that the common stock of GameStop, ticker GME, is being manipulated in various ways, including, but not limited to, the issuance of phantom shares that are sold but not delivered.

>

>It is my belief that you as an officer or director of the company owe each shareholder a duty to address these illegal acts against the company, and I write this email as an official request that GameStop take action to address and rectify the phantom shares trading against your company.

>

>In that regard, it is my understanding from James "Wes" Christian that he believes he along with a company named ShareIntel (from Connecticut) have a proprietary system that allows them to determine (with a high degree of certainty) who has been (is) selling stock of GameStop and not delivering it.

>

>These illegal activities have substantially damaged me and my fellow shareholders. As such, I believe contacting ShareIntel to discuss retaining their services may be an appropriate consideration. Their contact information is as follows:

>

>In closing, I would thank you in advance for your consideration to your shareholders in addressing (with any legal measure) the phantom shares that are sold but not delivered against your company.

>

>

>

>Best regards,

>

\\[You wouldn't need to add the info on Shareintel. The email could also be amended to include addressing other manipulative strategies being exploited against GME\\]
