I'm reading more and more posts on the GME subs -

Topic: "I have 45 shares my broker only has 25 votes for me."

Some other brokers have no votes -

TDA admits they don't have the voting stuff ready.

SOMETHING along those lines ^^^^

Computershare account had it all - and recently - Elon was speaking about how the board at twit face owned hardly any stock -

So the bigger story here - is how brokers have been abusing share holder rights.

The stock split/dividend - whatever this is - the voting has caused major issues with the brokers -

We saw Netflix down big on wed - and mkt losing control on Friday - are brokers going to have to scramble for shares on Monday?

Is this evidence the brokers don't have the shares?

What a 5D chess move by Cohen and Co.

Have a great weekend - ■
