To be clear, I am not asking a financial advisor and I am not asking for anyone's advice. I am an XXX GME holder and am still holding. I like the company and I think they are doing great things. Heck, I've been a loyal CHEWY customer for years also. I don't work for any financial institution and while I feel that I'm an above average bear, I'm no Yogi.

My question, are we being played? Is it possible that this whole shorting thing was made up in the beginning to make someone (outside of hedge funds) rich?

One thing I've learned in my life is that I'm not nearly as important to the higher ups as I like to think I am. Is it possible that ole Kenny couldn't give two craps about what us apes are doing?

I don't fault anyone if this doesn't work out in our favor and I'll gladly do my part to help make the world a better place if it does, I just don't want to get tricked by someone with a more wrinkly brain than me.
