

Title: Guys I've got it! Loopring is not gonna be used for GME's marketplace... It's better than that Author: disoriented_llama
Created 2022-06-16 12:02:50 UTC
Permalink: /r/TheGloryHodl/comments/vdkejc/guys_ive_got_it_loopring_is_not_gonna_be_used_for/
Url: /r/Superstonk/comments/sjrzcq/guys_ive_got_it_loopring_is_not_gonna_be_used_for/

Linked Post Content:

... it's going to be used for the marketplace that extracts the stock from the DTC and puts it on to the Blockchain. GameStop are partnering both with Loopring and IMX in NFTs, but for different projects.

That's why it's written so odd in the 8-K filings; "GameStop will use Immutable X as their first layer-2 NFT integration for trading and minting, other than Loopring". OTHER than Loopring. Because Loopring is a separate case, and anyone that knows Loopring a separate case (like us in the future) will understand clearly what that means.

Also I looked at IMX on Binance, and the summary says their marketplace is on "STARK prover and rollup technology".

Some theories were going round a while back with competing views of what the NFT and Loopring space were about before the NFT site launch with the game emulator: whether Loopring was going to take the stock out of the DTC or whether it was going to provide the marketplace for NFTs. How about both in a master move from Ryan Cohen. Brock by Brick preaches that you should only move into a single blue ocean market (new field) at a time, 5 years apart between moves. Which is I think the rulebook Ryan Cohen is playing because he tweeted it's cover a while back (absolutely brilliant book by the way- as a management consultant myself, it's masterful what Knudsthorpe did to turn Lego around). What if they're leading in the gaming NFT world, but their utilising that NFT knowledge to go balls deep on someone else's stock market Blockchain with Loopring protocol. There was speculation too of other companies that were going to do the same.

Suppose if GameStop were to announce this and that they'd be recalling their shares to replace with NFT stocks on the Loopring hosted stock exchange. There'd be an instant MOASS. And GameStop might be looking at the blame. So they need us to DRS our shares and MOASS that way, so that they can just get to fucking announcing this already!

We should be HYPED ■■■■