

Title: If people are so concerned about being able to DRS your IRA shares, why not take the penalty and do it???

Author: rayborque

Created 2022-04-12 17:56:22 UTC

Permalink: /r/DDintoGME/comments/u2556z/if_people_are_so_concerned_about_being_able_to/

Url: https://www.reddit.com/r/DDintoGME/comments/u2556z/if_people_are_so_concerned_about_being_able_to/

I keep seeing this on the other GME subs (where I am unable to post). Clearly the topic has been brought up to GameStop IR, probably hundreds of times. And clearly they are not interested in making it possible for Computershare to be an IRA custodian.

My question to the people who continue to push this topic is, if this is such a burning issue for you, why don't you "put your money where your mouth is" and eat the 10% penalty, distribute your IRA shares, and direct register from your individual account? You know this is possible, right?

I have done this (it's extremely simple) and am irritated when it continues to be brought up when there is already a very simple solution.