I was watching Tech-linked and they talked about Meta having physical lounges using VR headsets. I.E. the "Metaverse"

I think the Metaverse is a fucking awesome concept and GameStop Is well positioned to be a pioneer of what that technology can bring with NFTs and blockchain. And GameStop already has physical locations. So they have lower costs for designing VR lounges.

Just some thoughts after watching the video. I think it relates to a market GameStop can enter with their customer focused mentality.
