I've been buying GME since early 2020, no prior experience investing in basically anything, at first was just bored with quarantine and saw other apes making money and wanted to get in on that. I started with one share which was all I could afford at the time, getting into the DD was the highlight of my day everyday back then and i grew quickly to not just be in it for the money but to support what i saw was a great investment and a good cause. I've recently broken into low-2X territory, my job situation has stayed the same and I'm still very "cash poor" and surviving rather than living but out of every paycheck I've bought as large a fractional share as I could afford. I'm only posting this because I was thinking that there are probably a ton of apes like me that can only afford to purchase very small fractions of a share at a time; people that would've only had one moon ticket if this whole fiasco would've been handled expediently, but since they dragged their feet and kicked their can now apes like myself have xx-moon tickets, and the apes that would've only had xx now have xxx... so, while I'm still disappointed at the state of the market and the crime happening right in front of our noses, I want to wish a hearty thank you to the powers that be for giving me time to build my reserves and strengthen my fiscal armament; this having come from some really rich guys that are about to be really broke and in jail, it means so much to me that yall gave us broke boys the opportunity to eat our bananas too. DRS your shares and never forget that no matter what they do to manipulate the price and no matter how long they can manage to kick the can along, the road they are on only has one destination, brown town.
