A LIBERTARIAN IS committed to the principle that liberty is the most important political value. Liberty means being free to make your own choices about your own life, that what you do with your body and your property ought to be up to you. Other people must not forcibly interfere with your liberty, and you must not forcibly interfere with theirs.

POLITICAL LIBERTY

There are many values other than liberty liberty. People talk about the freedom to be one's self, without being ostracized by a narrow-minded society. They talk about the freedom that comes from financial independence. And they talk about freedom from oppression by sources other than the state.
