Not really. But it's a better title than this one:

Blockchain and NFTs are not just about GIFs.

I know you know this - but for those that don't, blockchain and NFTs are finding use in various areas - have just done some work on using them for orthopaedics to track the origin and supply chain of medical implants, to verify who did what work on what part when, and to confirm that the right things were implanted to the right people, and give an auditable but secure medical record of these transactions.

Now, the gamestop marketplace doesn't support all this - but it does demonstrate the potential utility of this technology and good partnerships will demonstrate this. For e.g. concert tickets with decent gif that gives a printable moment poster plus a transferrable ticket that cuts out touts and bots and allows real fans to get to see their bands at sensible prices has to be a winner.....
