

Title: ■■■■

Author: 69diamondhands

Created 2021-09-09 08:57:24 UTC

Permalink: /r/ratioatblessions/comments/pku1wl/_/

Url: /r/DDintoGME/comments/pkarjs/who_is_gamestop_batman_somebody_capable_of_high/

Linked Post Content:

The run ups have much larger volume, half of which is short interest, someone is sucking up those sales. In between runups there are obvious periods where gamestop is tightly correlated to the prices of shorter term treasuries. Someone is buying when the cost of borrowing is falling and selling when the cost of borrowing is increasing. Additionally, the correlation between meme stocks implies that someone is trying to corner the short hedge funds by giving them no way out. If the short positions rise and fall together, you can't find one ticker or another whose short positions you can preferentially close. Baby we have a Batman, a hero, a wealthy benefactor. January had a billion in shares traded in lit and dark pools and half a billion traded in OTC with a float of 50 million. THAT WAS NOT RETAIL. We don't have that kind of heft.

EDIT: Sorry to those that don't like hyperbole or think I should work harder to provide sources. Some people put banana's up their butts. I have a job and am busy. Good luck with yo tendies.