

Title: Motley Fool article on GME explains why the stock split being a dividend doesn't change anything.
Can anyone tell me if/why they are wrong?

Firstly, we know the fool is run by shitheads who hate us and retail. They constantly tell us to forget buying gamestop, so obviously we inverse them and buy more.

However, this is the first fool article that i've read in ages that alludes to the stock being heavily shorted, and the fact that shorting GME is a terrible idea.

Im trying to get my head round the dividend issue as many others are, and fool are saying it makes zero difference to short sellers and is just for accounting purposes?

Can you explain to me whats wrong about their claims, because im trying to get my head round it?
