Is_self: True

We need to realize that more than 70 million individuals own shares and if we consider these collectables and don't want to give them up, they are in for a much greater hurting than we could imagine and they know it!

They knew it in January and had no fucking clue how to handle it so just imagine now, 7 months later and all they have done/been able to do is double down exponentially every week till an answer comes.

Its going too fast and there is no other answer than to fucking pay us what we should have had by now on our own and some really fucking heavy interest for the trouble of it all!

Obligatory: hedgies are fucked!
