I am an XXX holder who, like most of you, have been adding to my position all year. I have already DRSD shares from my broker on multiple accounts. It has always been a super quick process - off the phone with no questions on either side. Today though, when trying to DRS XX more gme shares, they had to transfer me to "options and margin" even though I do not have options or margin on my account. The service rep gave me a long winded warning essentially discouraging drs due to transfer agent fees and the transfer time.

They are running out.
